HISTORY REWRITTEN

We suspect that emperor Akbar would like this white, acrylic chair with star-shaped legs in his palace. Particularly since it's called Akbar Is A Star. Conceived by film-maker and designer Mozez Singh, MUGHAL POP is a furniture and home accessories range comprising 37 pieces, inspired by the Mughal empire. Every quirky piece has a suitable name to match – Moonstruck Shahjahan², Murmurs In The Zenana and Xoxo, Taj Mahal. Mughal Pop is for those who want to make a STATEMENT in their home, where unconventional materials like smoky quartz, red carnelian and malachite have been cleverly combined with arabesque-inspired jaali work, Islamic calligraphy and digital prints.

Available at GOODEARTH stores around the country.

STITCH IN TIME

It's hard to miss the huge psychedelic installation of a sewing machine by fashion designer Manish Arora at this store's window display. You would think you're walking into Charlie's crazy chocolate factory, but in place of candy, be prepared to be dazzled by multicoloured rows of yarn, buttons, embellishments and zippers. THE HAB by Usha is a brilliant reinvention of a brand that created its first sewing machine in 1934. Designed by Grandmother

India, this bright CRAFT LOUNGE has cool pod stations for you to create all kinds of cute artwork, with the help of digitalised Usha sewing machines. We're looking forward to signing up for their DIY workshops.

Just because you think you can use photoshop does not mean that you should.

"Just come up with a few quick logos" is an oxymoron.

ON A ROLL

Anneke Short's blog has many things that will make you smile. One of them is CONFESSIONS OF A DESIGNER, block-coloured sheets with quotes that one often hears from people in the industry. Our favourite: "Comic Sans is never an acceptable font. Unless you are an eight-year-old girl writing a poem about unicorns."
